EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

GERMANY has been having a regular old-fashioned flood. Great damage has been done to property and some lives have been lost.

AS WAS feared, the Scranton steel works have shut down for an indefinite period, and over one thousand men are thrown out of work.

WYOMING territory has fewer persons within its limits who are unable to write than any other state or territory in the union. Wyoming has successfully tried the experiment of female suffrage.

MIRACULOUS faith cures are becoming more frequent. Spinal affection is not the only disease which has yielded to its influence, but the list includes one case of deafness and one of incipient inward cancer.

MRS. MELVILLE, wife of the Arctic hero (?), has recovered her daughter from the confinement in which Engineer Melville had placed her. If we may judge by the newspaper accounts, the daughter was rejoiced to be restored to her mother and sisters.

IT is said that Mrs. Langtry has quarreled with her only female admirer on this side of the Atlantic. Mrs. Labouchere has separated from her beautiful companion and will "visit a friend" in Richmond, and, unless reconciled, Mrs. Langtry will henceforth find it necessary to make her triumphal tour unattended by any confidential female companion.

MRS. LANGTRY Saturday concluded her first engagement with two performances that yielded more than four thousand dollars. The entire engagement of four weeks yielded more than sixty thousand dollars—more than fifteen thousand dollars per week. The admission prices and the size of the house considered, this is the most remunerative engagement ever played in New York.

MRS. LANGTRY comes from the Island of Jersey, which has a parliament of its own, and retains many of the old Norman customs as well as the Norman dialect. The Langtrys, however, are an English family, their residence in Jersey being only temporary. The popular actress has half a dozen brothers and a large number of poor relations who look to her for assistance.

IT SEEMS to be conceded by the Democrats that the State Senate, having a clear majority of eleven members devoted to the Republican party, must of course be organized by the Republicans. But nevertheless the Democratic leaders are shrewdly endeavoring in some way to patch up a bargain by which they can get the control of the Apportionment Committee, and thus apportion the State to suit their own partisan interests.

Two years must pass before the Presidential election, but the candidate is already in the field to a numerous and increasing extent. On the Republican side Blaine, Windom, Harrison, Logan, Edmunds, Lincoln and Washburne have already been mentioned; and among the Democratic possibilities are Hancock, Tilden, Judge Black, Voorhees, Butler, McDonald, Cleveland, Hendricks, Morrison and Randall. Assuredly the national conventions of 1884 will have no lack of material from which to pick and choose; but it is possible that one, if not two, dark horses may enter into the race and falsify all the current forecastings. The above list of names may appear very long, but when contrasted with the number of politicians who would like to be President it is brief, indeed.

A Word to Ministers.

There may be more than a grain of truth in the following from the N. Y. Tribune:

There is not a clergyman of any denomination who fills a pulpit today that would not be glad to hear an answer to the riddle why his pews are filled with women rather than men. The clergyman is apt to attribute it to criminal carelessness; the man takes no thought for his soul. The woman is naturally devout. This is a mistake. There is no subject so interesting to any man, no matter how wicked he may be, as his chance of salvation, the Being he calls God, and the relation in which he personally stands to Him. He will go to hear the preacher who can tell him the bare truth about himself and his daily life; and he will respect him, too He does not go to hear the ordinary preacher because his sermons do not touch himself, his temptations, cravings, or the phases of life known to him in office, political club or shop. Americans who have visited Great Britain this year report a striking contrast between the sub jects of sermons preached there and here. The rule is almost invariable that the sermon in England shall treat of the subject, which for the time occupies public attention. In American churches, especially among those which boast the most learning and culture in their ministers, there is a growing dislike to meddle with the personal spiritual affairs of the flock. The sermons are usually theoretic essays which, however correct, have as much to do with the actual life of street and house, as the colored lines in a map have to do with the real water in the river or the dust in the road; or they are carefully written library efforts of good purport, which challenge the criticism of the hearer, but which he never could imagine were a sharp call to look to his own soul and its condition. The well-bred gentleman who fills the pulpit naturally feels a gentleman's reluctance to grapple barehanded with the individual dishonesty, the drunkenness, the false rules of life of his neighbors. Unconsciously, perhaps, he finds some devil to fight who is not at all likely to be a daily familliar of his friend in the pews. The Unitarian inveighs against the ill done by the doctrine of the Trinity; the Romanist looks upon heresy as the incurable evil, the Protestant regards the Church of Rome as Antichrist; while all alike unite in denouncing mortal sins and bad passions of old-established reputation, and in upholding the Saviour for our imitation.

MacVeagh's Letter.

When Mr. MacVeagh retired from the position of Attorney General he wrote a letter to President Arthur explaining his reasons for not continuing in that capacity in the latter's cabinet. The severe comments which were made upon his action at that time will be remembered by all. There were many who thought him very inconsiderate and impetuous. They feared that he was laying himself open to the charge of running away from the Star Route prosecutions in which he had drawn his gleaming sword. They saw a persistent and malicious attempt to place him in a false position, and some of his best friends trembled lest his resolute and unflinching determination to leave the cabinet in the face of apparent entreaties to stay and carry on the war would give color to the unjust accusations.

But the most skeptical were long since convinced that Mr. McVeagh's penetration was keener than that of his critics. He would have been an incongruous element in the present administration; like the grain of sand in Coleridge's simile, between the flesh and the shell of the snail, he would inevitably have been a source of constant irritation. His letter to the President has been published at a time when the truth of its utterances can be fully comprehended.

The Weather Again.

The seasons never change without prognostications being made by those who have more or less repute for wisdom on the subject that the approaching periods will be unusual in some respects. It is noticeable about these predictions, however, that they are all of one kind. If summer is the season approaching, all the signs indicate that unusual heat will prevail; but if the season be winter, hundreds of evidences of unexampled frigidity exist. If there are any evidences extant of mild winters or summers they are not recorded.

There is an impression abroad that the season upon which we entered last Friday is to be extremely cold and very snowy, with the hope held out that it will end early. The "signs," handed down through many generations, all point that way, it is said. Who has not heard, for example, that the day of the month on which the first snow falls indicates with unerring accuracy the number of snow storms we shall have during the winter? Well, the first snow this year fell on the 26th, and we are to have twenty-six snow storms unless the weather clerk has got his figures muddled. Then, again, it is an equally trustworthy sign that if the first snow turns into rain all the subsequent storms of the winter will do the same thing, and there will be little or no sleighing; but if the first storm ends without rain, all its followers will do the same, and the merry tinkle of bells will abound throughout the season. All this is well and of good import. A cold winter with plenty of snow not only brings enjoyment, but what is better, health. One sign of this was entered in the autumn, and there were many weather-wise persons who went about while snow was falling last week wagging their heads and saying: "Ah, I knew it! I knew we should have an early winter because we have had so much rain in the fall. If you remember, I so predicted at the time." It is a matter of small moment to this kind of prophet whether anybody's memory stands the test or not. He knows perfectly well that he made the prediction.

THE report of the controller of the currency is completed, and ready for transmission to congress. The Altoona Tribune learns from it that the number of national banks organized during the year ending November 1 has been 171, with an aggregate authorized capital of $15,767,300 to which $6,500,680 in circulating notes have been issued. This is the largest number of banks organized in any year since 1872, and they are distributed in geographical divisions as follows: Eastern states, nine banks, with a capital of $950,000; middle states, twenty six, with a capital of $2,519,000; southern states, twenty-nine, with a capital of $2,775,300; western states, eighty-six, with a capital of $7,940,000; Pacific states and territories, twenty-one with a capital of $1,585,000. Nineteen banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,855,000 and circulation of $1,440,800 have voluntarily discontinued business during the year. National banks are organized in every state of the union and in every organized territory. The total number in operation on October 3 last was 2,260, and is the largest number that has ever been in operation at any one time. The capital of the 2,239 national banks in operation on July 1 was $477,184,390, not including surplus, which fund at that date amounted to more than $131,000,000, while the aggregate capital of the state banks, private bankers, and saving banks, for the six months ending May 31, 1882, was only $234,929,956. The latter amount is less than two-fifths of the combined capital and surplus of the national banks.

THE attorney general is of the opinion that the star route contractors have stolen not less than four million dollars from the people.

Blunders as Capital.

We regret to see it stated in various quarters that some Republicans are hopeful of success through the known capacity of the Democrats for blundering. The Philadelphia North American says that undoubtedly "such a capacity of one political party has frequently constituted some portion of the capital of an opposing party. But at best it is a negative credit capital, paid in by inadvertence. Any profit derived from that species of capital can never swell the actual capital of a political party. It is in politics as it is in business, that is to say, when a man ceases to depend on his real cash capital and pluck, and learns to depend upon fortuitous happenings for profits, he is not far away from bankruptcy."

No, the Republican party is proud to allude to its past history, while Democracy is vainly endeavoring to cover from view its shameful record. The Republican party also looks hopefully forward to the future; hope that is based on the expectation that it will address itself in a manly way to the work proper for a great party to do, and in that way deserve to succeed. It has proved equal to great things in the past. It took a bankrupt treasury and a collapsed credit, and in the midst of great tribulations replenished the one and restored the other. And it made freedom universal. Much more than this it has done, and with the applause of the civilized world. Shall we say that a party with such a record hangs its hopes of a future upon Democratic blunders? For shame! The Democrats may blunder—they generally do, but the Republican party has a more stable foundation than that upon which to base expectations of future triumphs, and will win in 1884 such a victory as never perched upon the banners of any party.

THE recent crash in the steel rails market has attracted considerable attention to the number of miles of railroad constructed during the past year. The Railway Age reports that 1,068 miles of road were completed in October, making 9,143 miles in 10 months of 1884. About the close of October of last year only 5,763 miles have been reported for the year. The building in October was largely in the far North. "Over a third of the whole was along the Canada border, 172 miles in Minnesota, 131 in Dakota, and 62 in Montana, total 365 miles. West of the Mississippi, along the Southern line only 142 miles were built, including only 60 in Texas. In Colorado 47 miles and in other central States west of the Mississippi 64 miles were built, making 141 miles. Adding only 33 miles for California and Oregon, we have 681 miles built in October west of the Mississippi river. In States south of the Ohio and Potomac, and east of the Mississippi, only 112 miles were built; in the Northern states east of the Ohio line only 64 1-2 miles, and in Northern States between that line and the Mississippi 211 miles including fifty-five in Ohio and thirty-three in Michigan, 30 in Indiana, 49 in Illinois, and 38 in Wisconsin. In all States east of the Mississippi only 387 1-2 miles were built. Running a line along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers from Lake Erie to the Gulf, we find only 176 miles of road built east of that line, and 892 miles west of it."

HERE he is in a new field. The ubiquitous Count De Lesseps now turns up as one of the operators of the projected Cape Cod canal. He must be absolutely afflicted with what might be termed "ditchomania," or he would never trouble his mighty mind over a three million dollar sluiceway. Surely this continent can produce engineering talent sufficient for such an enterprise, and for that matter for one of fifty times its requirements and importance, without calling upon this meddlesome Frenchman to dip his spade into it.

Thanksgiving.

We don't believe that Thanksgiving day has lost any of the devotional spirit which marked its observance in years that are gone. Those are depraved indeed who do not realize that in existence alone they have a cause for gratitude, when living under a Constitution which affords to honest, earnest industry such boundless possibilities. Sorrow and pain and suffering there will ever be, yet all will admit, after a hasty glance around them, that the ills they bear are light compared to what they might be were the peculiar burdens of others thrust on them.

The mere cessation of business, a brief breathing spell in the hurried race of life, is in itself a boon; and even if the Thanksgiving dinner did not boast a turkey as its chief dish, the fact that the scattered members of the family in many cases were enabled to meet with more comfort and less haste than usual should give it a welcome zest. Thanksgiving Day is, after all, an American institution, and it is one of which we may well be proud, and for which we should with equal earnestness be grateful

FRANK FRAYNE, a variety actor, was successful for a long time in shooting an apple off the head of a woman who had sufficient nerve to put herself in such a dangerous position, but he finally sent a bullet through her brain, and now he is ovewhelmed with remorse over the sad calamity. This young woman is the second victim to this foolhardy practice on the stage, the first one having met her death at Providence, Rhode Island, a few years ago. The terrible affair caused the legislature to pass a law prohibiting such exhibitions in that state. But time wore away and the affair was forgotten. Now the public has been horrified again and a cry will go up for the abolition of the savage custom. It should be done away with entirely.

THE extent to which speculation has been carried on in this country may be shown clearly by two illustrations. The sales of oil during six days amounted to 119,000,000 barrels, or four times as many as are in existence to-day, and as much as has been produced by all the oil wells in five years. The sales of cotton in New York alone during the past two months reached 7,780,700 bales, or a good deal more than the crop grown in the country this year.

Predicting a Great Storm.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The President has received a communication from Prof. E. Stone Wiggins, LL. D., Astronomer of the Canadian Finance Department, as follows:

OTTAWA, Nov. 27, 1882.

To his Excellency President Arthur, President of the United States, Washington.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: On the 22d of September last I announced through the Canadian press that a great storm would occur in March next, that it would first be felt in the Northern Pacific, would appear in the Gulf of Mexico on the night of the 9th, and being reflected by the Rocky Mountains would cross this meridian from the west at noon of March 11, 1883.

No vessel whatever her dimensions, will be safe out of harbor, and none of small tonnage can hope to survive the tidal wave and fury of this tempest. As the wind will blow from the southeast, the planetary force will be sufficient to submerge the low lands of the American coast, especially those bordering on the Gulf of Mexico and washed by the Gulf Stream, while the air currents for several hundred miles along the east side of the Rocky Mountain range, owing to the atmospheric pressure in those regions, will spread universal destruction.

The New England States will also suffer severely from the wind and floods. No point outside of harbor, in the whole area of the Atlantic, especially north of the equator, will be a place of safety, for this will be preeminently the greatest storm that has visited this continent since the days of your illustrious first President.

In view of this event, therefore, I take the great liberty of representing to your Excellency the advisability of ordering all United States ships into safe harbors not later than the 5th of March till this storm be passed.

Poetry.

THE OLD SONGS.

'Tis pleasant "to steal awhile away,"
And remember the songs we sung—
Ere the dear home circle was broken,
In the days when we were young,
"The Campbells are coming" as boldly as then,
When we sat at the mother's feet,
Though they may have crossed the river—
Where time and eternity meet.
Tho' "Greenland's mountains are icy—"
They warm our hearts to the core,
For they ring with the echo of voices,
That warble on earth no more.

We recall the myriad schoolmates—
Who peopled the changeful past—
And dream over words they have spoken,
And the place where we saw them last,
And wonder if time has robbed them
Of the treasures they cherished then,
While he traced on earth's visage the features
Of woman or stalwart men,
Though I may have long been forgotten,
As an atom on life's ocean foam—
Yet methinks that many a thought will return
As we mention the "Old Folks at Home."
We think of the gay companions,
Who bartered the laurel for rue,
Whose accounts return so sadly
In the notes of "The Red, White and Blue."

Who marched 'neath the "Star Spangled Banner,"
To the plains of the sunny South,
Where the sweet old melodies mingled
With the boom from the cannon's mouth,
Old comrades: "Tho' hearts grow weary"
'Mid sorrow, estrangement and care—
The songs of our youth still charm us,
Though sombre the robes we wear,
And we fancy the music of "Auld lang syne"
Will linger as death draws nigh—
And unite us to earth while singing
The tunes of the "Sweet by and by."

She was so fond of music,
My pretty charmer, Hattie,
And so we went together
To hear the glorious Patti.

The last notes of the Diva
In silence died away;
The hearts of all the hearers
Confessed her magic sway.

And in my eyes a something
Like tears began to shine,
And to my love I murmured:
"Oh, is it not divine?"

She answered—on her features
A rapturous regard:
"Yes, beautiful! I wonder
How much it cost a yard!"

Our Story Teller.

Doubly Saved.

I must tell you all that has happened to me since my birthday party—my sixteenth birthday, that we kept so merrily in our country home.

It was soon after Christmas, the twenty-eighth of December, and the Christmas decorations were all about the room, and the children's Christmas tree, all glittering with glass balls and little candles, stood in the corner. I wore my white silk with Jacqueminot roses in my hair and at my bosom. Amy Lovelace, my dearest friend, had pale yellow silk and tea roses. We were the best dancers in the room, and papa had quite a little band to play for us.

I remember Amy telling me that she thought Doctor Garcia had the most beautiful eyes she ever saw, except in the head of a seal. Such a funny compliment! But they were splendid, and Amy was right; and when she said he was very much in love with me, she was right, too.

But Charlie Constant had been courting me for some time, and he proposed that evening when he followed me into father's study, where I went to get some music. I remember just what he said—the very words.

"Rose, you are the prettiest girl I know. May I have you?"

I laughed, and said, "Yes, if mother and father say so."

And he kissed me.

Later on, when Madame Vine was playing a wonderful piece, all trills and quavers and crashes, Doctor Garcia got me to himself in a quiet corner, and did the same thing. What he said was, "Rosa, I love you better than my life. I wish I thought you liked me enough to be my wife some day."

And in spite of what had just happened, a real pang pierced my heart.

How he could look at one, and what a deep, soft voice he had! I had hard work to answer just as I did.

"Oh, Doctor Garcia, I do like you, but I'm engaged to Charlie Constant."

But, then, who could blame me for my choice? Mr. Constant was old Archibald Constant's only son—rich, handsome, accomplished—all that men envy; and Dr. Garcia was poor, had his way to fight in the world, and was not handsome. Good? Oh, yes, I knew that well; but all the girls envied me Charley Constant. Yes, I said that quite quietly, and he took my hand, said, "God bless you; I hope you will be very happy," and went away, and I did not see him for a long time. Charley brought me a ring next day, and we were to be married on my seventeenth birthday.

What a pleasant year it was! It passed like a dream, and mid-winter came again, and the week before my wedding was a full moon.

We had planned a glorious ride ten miles through the country roads. Charley and I were together, of course. We drove two new horses that day—animals that cost him a fortune, and were splendid creatures, though very nervous and hard to handle. But I was not easily frightened then; I did not know what fear was. I could not remember ever having been hurt in all my life. I had never been ill or unhappy.

We flew over the ground, until we came near a rocky declivity known as "The Great Delf," which was covered with snow, the branches of great trees all covered with icicles growing in confusion along the side. One branch fell as we dashed along. It frightened the horses. They swerved; the vehicle turned over; That's all I know about it. Afterwards I came to myself down on the rock, horribly hurt and cold—so cold I could not stir, and I knew I was freezing to death.

I did not know what had happened to Charlie. Perhaps he was lying near me, dead. The sun was going down, and far up above I saw the bank over which I had fallen. I thought of mother, and father, and everybody, and it seemed very hard to die. Oh, Charlie must be dead, I thought, or he would have come down to me. It was all a kind of dream by that time, but just as the last red gleam faded away I saw a man coming down the rock. A rope was around his waist and a staff in his hand. He came nearer and nearer and at last he was beside me.

It was not Charlie. It was a bigger man than he.

"Is it father?" I asked, through my frozen lips.

"No," was the answer—"no, darling! father is up on the rocks there. It is I,"—and I knew it was Doctor Garcia.

I don't know how he got me up, but he did it somehow. I had fainted. I was in a little roadside tavern, in bed between blankets, aching in every limb, but at least not out in that fearful cold. I heard father tell Doctor Garcia he had saved my life, and I tried to thank him. And it was mother who told me Charlie was safe. I had not dared to ask.

Afterwards I found that the horses had run away, and the rest of the party had gone on knowing nothing of the accident; and that Mr. Charles Constant had arrived at my father's in a farmer's cart, to tell them I was dead at the bottom of the "Great Delf."

"I should only have killed myself if I'd gone after her," he had said, "even if I had not been so bruised and hurt."

That was true enough, and I did not blame him, although I thought that I, woman as I was, would have got to him somehow. But, you see, I called him Mr. Constant. He was never Charlie to me again.

I had been very much hurt, and after weeks and weeks had passed away I began to know that I was not likely to be myself again.

I asked Doctor Garcia to tell me the truth.

"Could you bear if it were so?" he asked.

"I begin to think we can bear anything," I said; "and you need not say any more."

After that, the next day, I sent for Mr. Constant. I don't want to tell you what passed, but when he went away he had my ring again, and I knew he had never loved me. I was very hard to bear—very, very hard; but, as I said, we can bear anything that can befall us.

Summer came slowly. When it was warm, I began to sit up again, and to try to knit a little; and then Doctor Garcia began to take me out for a ride. He used to lift me in and out of his little carriage like a baby, and he petted me like one. I am sure he spent half his fees in buying books for me. He was the only one of the young men who troubled themselves about me now, and do you wonder I began to love him? I used to cry to think I had not felt in that way when I dared hope to make a man happy by loving him. If he could do all of this out of pity, what would he not do for love? It never came into my mind that anybody could love me now, until one evening he came and told me so.

"More than ever, darling!" he said. "More than ever!"

I nestled up against him, and hid my face on his shoulder, and cried like a baby.

"I ought to say no," I said. "What good am I to anyone?"

But he kissed me—oh, how he kissed me! And he told me I was more to him than anything else the world could give; and then I told him that was what he was to me, for indeed, indeed he was!

"If I could only walk about as I used," I said, "and look pretty, and be useful again! I am ashamed to give you this helpless little me."

"You are always pretty," he answered; "always, always!"

But I felt that he did not hope that I should walk. The fall had paralized my limbs, you see.

Mother put me to bed that night, as usual, and I lay awake for hours, thinking of him, and longing for health and strength to be of use to him who loved me so. And, Amy, such a strange thing happened! In the middle of the night I thought I awoke, and a beautiful woman stood near my bed. I looked, but felt no fear, and she smiled on me; and then a sense of relief came over me I never had experienced before.

Doubtless it was all a dream; but when I did awake, I felt that something had happened to me. The numbness was gone; I could move, and from that moment I began to feel well.

I am almost as strong as ever now. Though I know I am not so pretty, and perhaps I never shall be; but I suit Garcia, and I am content—nay, I am more than that—thankful and happy beyond the power of words to tell; and as I sit here looking at the river, and thinking that tomorrow will be my wedding day, I honestly believe that no living woman can be so blest as Jack Garcia's wife; and my honest prayer is that I shall be worthy of him and his love.

The old general sends an orderly to announce to his young wife that he shall be home to dinner instead of leaving town on a tour of inspection. "Well," said the general, when the messenger returned from his errand, "did she say anything—send any message?" "She didn't say anything general," replied the orderly, "but she looked whole circulating libraries.

Lurline and Her Lover.

Night in St. Louis.

Seated in the parlor of her father's magnificent residence, Lurline Loosehair allowed her taper fingers to wander idly over the keys of the piano, and, obedient to her delicate touch, there floated forth on the air the strains of that beautiful miserere, "Since Papa Tore His Pants." And as she sat there, absorbed in the sad reflections to which the music gave rise, the door opened softly and Berwyck Hetherington entered the room. Lurline, all the senses of her pasionate nature absorbed in the music, continued to play, not knowing that the man she loved, and to win whose pocketbook in return she would have hustled around with dread earnestness, was standing by her side. But at last Berwyck placed his hand gently upon her shoulder, and by that indefinable sense that tells us of a human presence, although we see it not, she knew that somebody was around. Turning quickly she saw Mr. Hetherington.

"I did not know you were here," she said, a blush flooding the face that such a little time ago was pale and calm, "or I should not have played so confidently."

"Can you not favor me with something more?" he said.

The blush grows deeper and more vivid now and the drooping eyes are moist with tears. But in an instant she recovered her self-possession, and looks at him in the frank, honest way in which Cincinnati girls ask for more pie.

"I cannot play any other piece," she says, half sadly, half defiantly.

"Are you sure of this, Lurline?" Berwyck asks, bending over her in a loving way. "Think well before you speak," he continues, "for on your answer may depend the future happiness of two young lives."

"I am quite sure," she says.

"Then you must be my wife." And as he speaks these words Berwyck Hetherington's face lights up with a rapturous, Schuyler Colfax smile. "Do you love me?" he asks.

For answer, she puts her arms around his neck, kisses him coldly behind the left ear, and then a great silence fell upon them.

Presently Berwyck rises to go. "You will come again to-morrow evening?" she asks.

"Yes," he replied, "you may tie the dog at 8."

"And you will not regret your choice?"

"Never," he says, in clear, steady tones. "I have spent the best years of my life looking for a girl who could play only one tune on the piano."

The Modern Red Riding Hood.

The subject of this sketch was a clever little girl, who derived her odd name from wearing on her head the sleeve of her father's old red flannel shirt. She was an independent little piece, and when asked why her mother didn't buy her a new bonnet, said she would "just sleeve wore what she had on." When one of the neighbors' children sneeringly said: "Your pa gets drunk," Little Red Riding Hood responded: "Your pa would, too, but he can't afford it;" and when the next-door boy ill-naturedly said: "Your mother takes in washing," Little Red Riding Hood answered "She don't take in much when your mother gets the first whack at the line."

It will be seen from these incidents in her life that though little read, she was well posted, and the confidence with which her mother dispatched her to carry codfish balls down into Stoors township to her sick grandmother is easily understood.

Holding the lead dime, which her mother had given her for her car fare, tightly in her hand, Little Red Riding Hood started for a street car, and having a few minutes to wait, improved the opportunity by setting up a howl that attracted the attention of a benevolent old gentleman, to whom she explained her cause for grief. She was going, she said, to her poor, sick grandmother, and had been put off a car because her dime was a counterfeit. The gentleman gave her a quarter and put her on the next car. The conductor in due time called on Little Red Riding Hood for a fare, when she produced her lead dime. "This is counterfeit," said the conductor; whereat Riding Hood fell to sobbing as if her heart would break; the conductor passed her, and an old lady gave her a dime and a boy shared some gingerbread with her. Arrived at her grandmother's house, Little Red Riding Hood sat down and ate the codfish balls; then she bought some milk from a drunken milkman, upon whom she passed the counterfeit dime, receiving from him 16 cents in change, after which she proceeded to her grandmother's and staid with her for three weeks.

In contrasting this story with the original Little Red Riding Hood, the reader should bear in mind the disadvantage our heroine labored under in being her own wolf, a role which she sustained with signal ability. There does not appear to be anything more to add except that the town is full of our kind of Little Red Riding Hoods.

The dresses of Lollia Paulina, the rival of Aggripina, were valued at $2,764,480, not including her jewels, which cost as much more. It has slipped our memory whether Miss Paulina was the daughter of a plumber or editor, but our impression is that she was.

You can hold an opinion more firmly than you can clutch a hornet.

A Professional Confession.

THE UNUSUAL EXPERIENCE OF A PROMINENT MAN MADE PUBLIC.

The following article from the Democrat and Chronicle, of Rochester, N. Y., is of so striking a nature, and emanates from so reliable a source, that it is herewith re-published entire. In addition to the valuable matter it contains, it will be found exceedingly interesting.

To the Editor of the Democrat and Chronicle:

SIR:—My motives for the publication of the most unusual statements which follow are, first, gratitude for the fact that I have been saved from a most horrible death, and, secondly, a desire to warn all who read this statement against some of the most deceptive influences by which they have ever been surrounded. It is a fact that to-day thousands of people are within a foot of the grave and they do not know it. To tell how I was caught away from just this position and to warn others against nearing it, are my objects in this communication.

On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for my death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous, any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, had weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull and indefinite pains in various parts of the body and do not understand it. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought it was nothing; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a dull, and at times a neuralgic, pain in my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid but little attention to it. However, my stomach was out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet I had no idea, even as a physician, that these things meant anything serious or that a monstrous disease was becoming fixed upon me. Candidly, I thought I was suffering from Malaria and so doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared upon the surface, and a sediment settled in the bottom. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

There is a terrible future for all physical neglect, and impending danger always brings a person to his senses even though it may then be too late. I realized, at last, my critical condition and aroused myself to overcome it. And, Oh! how hard I tried! I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the prominent mineral springs in America and traveled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another nervous prostration; another malaria; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of all of which I really had. In this way several years passed during all of which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. The slight symptoms I at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders—the little twigs of pain had grown to oaks of agony. My weight had been reduced from 297 to 130 pounds. My life was a torture to myself and friends. I could retain no food upon my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell upon the floor, convulsively clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death-premonitory hiccoughs constantly. My urine was filled with tube casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys in its last stages.

While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, rector of St. Paul's Church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation he mentioned a remedy of which I had heard much but had never used. Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures which had come under his observation, by means of this remedy, and urged me to try it. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I cherished the prejudice both natural and common with all regular practitioners, and derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice and try the remedy he so highly recommended. I began its use on the 1st day of June and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for me in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed, I vowed in the presence of my family and friends, should I recover I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity. I also determined that I would give a course of lectures in the Corinthian Academy of Music of this city, stating in full the symptoms and almost hopelessness of my disease and the remarkable means by which I have been saved. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 25 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition wholly to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the remedy I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state, deliberately, and as a physician, that I believe that more than one half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify it. Bright's disease has no distinctive symptoms of its own, (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity), but has the symptoms of nearly every other known complaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate of "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "paralysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pneumonia," and other common complaints, when in reality it was Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence by the commonest symptoms, and fastens itself upon the constitution before the victim is aware. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, and as such is usually supposed to be heart disease. As one who has suffered, and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore every one who reads these words not to neglect the slightest somptoms of Kidney difficulty. Certain agony and possible death will be the sure result of such neglect, and no one can afford to hazard such chances.

I am aware that such an unqualified statement as this, coming from me, known as I am throughout the entire land as a practitioner and lecturer, will arouse the surprise and possible animosity of the medical profession and astonish all with whom I am acquainted, but I make the foregoing statements based upon facts which I am prepared to produce and truths which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

"Bell of Justice."

In one of the old cities of Italy, a bell was hung in a tower, which any one was at liberty to ring who had been wronged, and by it summon the magistrate to see that justice was done him. It was called the "Bell of Justice," and the following beautiful story is associated with it:

When in course of time, the lower end of the bell-rope rotted away, a wild vine was tied to it to lengthen it; and one day, an old and starving horse, that had been abandoned by its owner and turned out to die, wandered into the tower, and, in trying to eat the vine, rang the bell.

The magistrate of the city, coming to see who had rung the bell, found this old and starving horse.

He caused the owner of the horse in whose service he had toiled and been worn out to be summoned before him, and decreed that, as this poor horse had rung the "Bell of Justice," he should have justice, and that during the remainder of the horse's life his owner should provide for him proper food and drink and stable.

Snatched from the Grave.

My wife was at the brink of the grave. She had been given up to die by three of Allegheny City's best physicians. They all pronounced her disease consumption. Her fingernails and lips were blue; was pulseless at the wrist; we were all called to witness her death. At this moment a neighbor brought in Dr. Hartman, who prescribed a teaspoonful of Peruna every hour. She improved from the first dose, and in a week she was up, and now (less than six months) she is well. See page 30 in the "Ills of Life," a book you can get gratis of your druggist. If not, address Dr. Hartman, Osborn, Ohio.

A Plan to Strengthen Memory.

Thurlow Weed recalled with great facility and accuracy long lists of names of men who were politicians in the various counties when Monroe ran for President—sixty years ago.

"You seem to remember as well as ever," a friend said to him one day.

"Better than I did once, I hope," he answered, with a smile. "If I had not cultivated my memory I should have been a dismal failure."

"Did you make a systematic effort to improve in the regular course of affairs?"

"I had to adopt a regular method," he said, "and I hit on one that was effective. I will tell you about it for the benefit of other young men. I got married in 1818, when I was working in Albany as a journeyman printer. In a few months I went into business, establishing a newspaper for myself, and some of my friends thought I was "cut out for a politician"—that is, I probably impressed my views strongly on those about me. But I saw at once a fatal weakness. My memory was a sieve I could remember nothing. Dates, names, appointments, faces—everything escaped me. I said to my wife, "Catherine, I shall never make a successful politician for I cannot remember, and that is a prime necessity of politicians. A politician who sees a man once should remember him forever."

"I recalled what had been said of Henry Clay: That he could go around a room and be introduced to fifty persons, and then, on mingling with the company, call every man by his right name. And I thought also of the colored fellow who officiates at the grand hat-rack in the vestibule of the United States Hotel at Saratoga, and who, as the hundreds of guests flock out of the dining-room, hands to each one instantly the hat, shawl, fan or whatever has been deposited there an hour or two before.

"My wife told me," continued Mr. Weed, that I must train my memory. So when I came home that night, I sat down alone and spent fifteen minutes trying silently to recall the events of the day. I could remember little at first; now I remember that I could not then remember what I had for breakfast. Finally I found I could recall more. Events came back to me more minutely and more accurately. After a fortnight or so of this, Catherine said, 'Why don't you tell it to me? It would be interesting, and my interest in it would stimulate you." Then I began a habit of oral confession, as it were, which I followed for almost fifty years. Every night, the last thing before retiring, I told my wife everything that I could recall that had happened to me or about me during the day. I generally recalled the very dishes I had had for breakfast, dinnar and tea; the people I had seen and what they said; the editorials I had written, and an abstract of them; the letters I had sent and received, and the very language used as near as possible; when I had walked or ridden—everything in short, that had come within my knowledge. I found I could say my lesson better and better every year, and instead of growing irksome it got to be a pleasure to run the events of the day in review. I am indebted to this discipline for a memory of somewhat unusual tenacity, and I recommend the practice to all who expect to have much to do with influencing men."

Terrible Oil Fire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Devo's oil works, situated near Newtown creek, L. I., opposite this city, burned this afternoon. The fire probably originated in a leak in a tank near the dock; for about 2:30 o'clock the tank exploded and burning oil ran over the premises and into the creek. A quantity went over a canal boat setting it on fire. The boat was loaded with oil and burned fiercely. A second tank then exploded, adding to the conflagration, and the employes were obliged to run for their lives. The fire department of that section was called out but their services were unavailable, as the water scattered the burning oil in every direction. The oil remaining in the tanks burned fiercely, throwing out such an intense heat that it was impossible to approach them. The flames communicated to Smith's box factory adjoining and that was badly damaged. The loss is believed to be about $75,000, although some oil men estimate it at a much higher figure.

LATER.—The fire originated in the works of the Brooklyn oil company and caused a loss of $100,000. The bark Thism was set on fire and her crew were compelled to jump overboard, and two of them were drowned. Church & Co.'s salsoda factory was ignited, but was saved from total destruction. The bark Estelle was set on fire and Captain Connors, his wife and a deck hand jumped overboard. They were rescued by a boat from the shore. Mrs. Connors' arms and hands were badly burned. Davis & Co. lose $60,000, the bark Thism $50,000, Church & Co. $20,000 and Smith's box factory $10,000.

Deadly Sulphur.

READING, November 30.—A very singular accident happened late yesterday afternoon in the Sixth street foundry of the Reading hardware works. Two of the moulders were rendered unconscious by sulphur and a number of others became very sick. It is supposed that the density of the atmosphere on the outside, and the fact that the foundry windows were closed tightly, prevented the sulphur from escaping by way of the cupola chimney or the windows. It was, therefore, driven through the opening in the cupola where the chargesare made, and scattered through all the northern portion of the foundry. Adam Spohn fell over while carrying a ladle of iron, and another employe named B. Chadwick also became ill, staggering about and vomiting and complaining of headache and pain in the stomach. Some of the rest of the employes were also more or less affected. A wagon was procured and Spohn and Chadwick were taken to their homes, the former on Laurel street near Sixth, and the latter near the junction. They are reported better to-day. The occurrence is described as being a very singular one. The affair created considerable commotion, and for a while the interior of the foundry resembled a hospital, the sick moulders lying about in every direction and trying to get fresh air. This was only obtained after the windows had been opened and the sulphur allowed to escape.

Fire at Johnstown.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 1.—Three frame dwellings and a stable, belonging to the Cambria Iron Company at Johnstown, were destroyed by fire this morning. The inmates of the dwellings were asleep when the fire broke out and for a time the greatest excitement and confusion prevailed. The Berkebill family found all means of escape cut off and finally the mother, after awakening her four children, took the infant in her arms and leaped from a porch in the rear, a distance of about twenty feet, escaping with slight injuries. John, the oldest boy, was rescued by a fireman after sustaining frightful burns on the arm. He was found unconscious on the floor. Two other children, Willie, aged six years, and Sarah, aged nine, were missed until the flames were extinguished, when their remains were discovered in the debris. The boy could not be distinguished from the girl. The loss by the fire is slight as the buildings were frame and of little value. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Bad for Brown.

NEW YORK, December 1.—James Brown, a truckman, aged twenty two years, was fatally stabbed about 1:30 this morning in a German beer saloon on Eighth avenue. He had come in with some companions from a grand ball given at the Grand Opera House. A quarrel arose and the proprietor ejected Walton, one of Brown's companions, and an unknown man who had a knife in his hand. Young Brown had fallen and it was discovered that he was dead, having been stabbed through the heart. Walton and two others were arrested but denied all knowledge of the crime. The police are searching for the unknown man.

Removed from Office.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Upon the demand of Attorney General Brewster, Hannibal D. Norton, chief clerk of the third assistant post master general's department, was removed from his place. Norton was one of the first witnesses called in the Star route trial and testified that the office to which he was attached had authority to audit as well as pay accounts. The prosecution believed his sympathies were with the defence and this cropped out in his evidence. No further removals were ordered at the cabinet session to-day.

A Young Woman's Suicide.

GREENSBURG, December 3.—A gentleman just returned from Salina, a little town on the West Penn road, six miles west of Saultsburg, reports the place in a fever of excitement over the tragic suicide of a young lady. The suicide took place about 5 o'clock Friday morning in a boarding house kept by a man named Heiner. The victim's name is Stoop, and her residence is on the West Penn railroad a short distance below the scene of the tragedy. She has been acting in the capacity of housekeeper for Mr. Heiner and, it is said, had formed an intimacy with a married man who boards at the house and who, it is reported, has a wife and family in Allegheny City. Miss Stoop was heard in earnest conversation with this man until 4 o'clock Friday morning, at which time she retired to bed. An hour later a report of a pistol was heard. It aroused several of the boarders, but it was supposed at the time that the shot had been fired out of the house and no attempt was made to investigate. When Miss Stoop failed to make her appearance at the usual hour in the morning suspicion was aroused, and after a fruitless effort to arouse her the door was broken down and she was found lying dead in her bed. with a revolver clutched tightly in her hand, a bullet hole in her head. A butcher knife and a large bladed penknife were found under the pillow. The revolver was indentified as that of the married man who had sat up with her the night before and he was called upon to make an explanation. He denied all knowledge of the contemplated suicide. He declared that he had lent the young lady his revolver a couple of weeks ago for an entirely different purpose, as he supposed, and he had no suspicion of the fatal use to which it was to be put. An inquest on the remains was held yesterday.

Frank Frayne Discharged.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 3.—Frank Frayne was before the police court yesterday morning on a charge of manslaughter for shooting Annie Von Behren at the Coliseum theatre at the Thanksgiving matinee. He appeared quite calm at the beginning, but as the testimony proceeded he was restless and at times deeply affected. The prosecution offered the testimony of Sergeant Benninger, who saw the shot and who arrested Frayne, and of Mr. Beam, a member of the company, who explained the cause of the accident. He said the thread of the screw holding the spring-catch was worn or torn off and the screw was blown out of the gun. The catch losing its hold permitted the gun barrel to drop and that sent the bullet below its aim. Mr. Frayne's breast and neck were burned and blackened by the powder escaping from the breech of the gun. The prosecution here rested and said the charge of manslaughter should be sustained by the statute which forbids any one to point a loaded gun at or toward any person. The counsel for Frayne claimed that the statute did not apply, as the gun was not pointed at the deceased, but at an apple six inches above her head. He suggested also that Frayne had already suffered the worst that could happen to any man and that no punishment which the law might inflict could give greater weight to the lesson of this accident. Judge Highley leaned to the opinion that the statute was not disobeyed in this case, because the gun was aimed at an object and not at a person. He said the testimony clearly showed that there was not the slightest criminal intent and that the prisoner should be discharged. This announcement was greeted with emphatic applause.

Grant on Fitz John Porter's Sentence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—A letter from General Grant to Senator Cameron, dated February, 1882, has just been furnished to the press. In it General Grant says when he commenced the examination of the Fitz John Porter case it was with the conviction that his sentence was a just one and that his punishment had been light for so hideous an offense, but that he came out of the examination with the firm conviction that an entirely innocent man had been most unjustly punished. An investigation of all the facts show conclusively that the court and some of the witnesses entirely misapprehended the position of the enemy. The General continues: "Although the court threw some censure upon him for lack of confidence in his commanding officer, on the contray to my mind he was zealous in giving a support to General Pope, and more so, possibly, for the reason that he knew, among his former army associates, there was a good deal of apprehension to say the least of his fitness for his new place. General Pope was selected from a western army, and there may, improperly, have been a feeling among many of the general officers that it was a reflection upon them."

Western Wickedness.

CHICAGO, December 1.—A dispatch received from Kalamazoo this morn announces the arrest there of Bill Allen, a colored desperado, who killed Officer Clarence E. Wright on Tuesday night in Chicago.

An Indian Territory special reports the capture of three murderers, named Walker, Reynolds and Garver, near Darlington, after a sharp struggle, during which they were nearly killed. They had murdered a young man in Comanche county, Texas, and the officers have been in pursuit of them for three weeks.

The President's Message.

WASHINGTON, December 4.—The senate was called to order at noon by President pro tem. Davis, after prayers by the chaplain.

The second session of the 47th congress was opened at 11 o'clock. The President's message was then read and ordered to be printed. An abstract of it is as follows:

WASHINGTON, December 4.—The message openes by reference to slight differences with Great Britain on account of the arrest of American citizens in Ireland. The difference between the United States and Spain as to the effect of a judgment and certificate of naturalization has not yet been adjusted, but it is hoped negotiations will result in establishing the position claimed by our government. Our efforts for the abatement of the exactions imposed on American vessels in Spain have thus far been unsuccessful. The president then recommends the early consideration of such modifications of our reciprocity treaty with Hawaii, as seem to be demanded by the interests of our people, and again invites the attention of congress to the lawlessness prevalent on the Mexican frontier.

With regard to the South American affairs, the president recapitulates the situation between Chilli and Peru. Our offices of mediation have been rejected, and to enforce them we would need the employment of our army, navy and ultimately a protectorate. The President is ready to support any measure which the wisdom of Congress may devise for the promotion of peace in this continent and throughout the world.

In reviewing the report of the secretary of the treasury the president sees nothing to alter and much to confirm the sentiments to which he gave expression last year regarding the coinage of silver dollars and retirement of silver certificates. The secretary's recommendation of immediate and extensive reductions in the annual revenues of the government is heartily approved. The present rapid extinguishment of our national debt is by no means a cause for congratulation, but rather for serious apprehension. Last year the president recommended the abolition of all internal revenue taxes, except those on tobacco and distilled and fermented liquors. He ventures now to suggest that all internal taxes, except those which relate to distilled spirits, can be prudently abrogated. Such a course would diminish the cost of collections at least two millions and a half of dollars, and retire from office from fifteen hundred to two thousand persons. The present excise tax should be abolished as soon as it is safe to do so. So sweeping a measure as total abolition of internal taxes would for the present be an unwise step, as it is doubtful if sufficient revenue could then be raised, and the president recommends the retention for the present of that portion of the system of internal revenue which is least objectionable to the people. The present tariff system is in many respects unjust, making unequal distributions of its burdens and its benefits. While recommending reductions the president is far from advising the abandonment of a policy so discriminating in the adjustment of the details as to afford aid and protection to domestic labor. He recommends an enlargement of the free list, so as to include the numerous articles which yield a considerable revenue; a simplification of the complex and inconsistent schedule of duties upon certain manufactures, particularly cotton, iron and steel, and a substantial reduction of duties on those articles and on sugar, molasses, silk, wool and woolen goods.

Our fortifications are notoriously inadequate to the defense of our harbors and cities. The attention of congress is invited to the propriety of making more adequate provision for arming and equipping the militia.

The president further suggests that considerable grants of money for international improvement be hereafter made the subject of distinct legislation, and not grouped in the river and harbor bill. If this be done, then he suggests a constitutional amendment permitting the president to veto objectionable portions of a bill.

As a tribute to those who perished, the message records the names of those who died on the Jeannette expedition.

In the reconstruction of our navy the cruising vessels should be gradually replaced by iron or steel ships, the monitors by modern armored vessels, and the armament by Hill's power rifled guns. Methods of reviving American ship building and of restering our flag in the ocean trade should receive the immediate attention of congress.

The president hopes that congress may soon afford the commercial community the benefits of a national bankrupt law.

Polygamy in Utah seems capable of being suppressed without resource to such radical measures as in some quarters were thought indispensable.

The attention of congress is directed to the question of preserving our forests, especially in the west.

Since the president in his last annual message called attention to civil service reform there has been no legislation on that subject, but the public interest has increased and the people, without regard to party, seem to demand prompt and definite action. The nation has outgrown the constitutional provisions for filling minor public offices and the president and others should be saved the personal importunity and the labor of examining conflicting claims and pretensions of candidates.

The Archbishop of Canterbury Dead.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The Archbishop of Canterbury died at 7.15 this morning. He passed away quietly, apparently without suffering, in the presence of his three daughters, Mr. Davidson, his son-in-law, Canon Knollys and Doctor Carpenter. Yesterday he remained in a semi-unconscious state, occasionally asking for water. About 11 o'clock at night he spoke his last words, "It is coming, it is coming." He was then seized with a sharp spasm and did not speak again, although it is believed he was partly conscious to the end. At 7 o'clock in the morning he exhibited signs of dissolution.

The Public Verdict.

The following letter from Hon. D. C. Haskell, a leader in the Congressional movement and bill against polygamy, is endorsed by Speaker Keifer, and will be found of interest to local amusement patrons. It is of especial interest to the people of Bellefonte at this time, as the drama to which it alludes will be given in Reynolds' Opera House on Thursday evening.

Probably no American play was ever produced which achieved a more instantaneous success at its initial performance than the play of "One Hundred Wives," and certainly no other ever attained in a single season so wide and universal an indorsement. It was performed uninterruptedly during a term of thirty-three weeks in all parts of the country, and enjoyed protracted and successful runs at the principal theatres in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, New Orleans, and the other great cities. It was received everywhere with uniform commendation and exceptional enthusiasm. It was found to appeal alike to the regular theatre-goers and to the religious classes. It attracted the attention of the ministers of the gospel and the religious press for the earnestness of its purpose and the timeliness of its mission. The large daily newspapers, contrary to their custom, gave editorial consideration to its merits as a drama as well as the excellence of its teachings, and whole volumes were written about it from first to last. Thousands of people have heard of the play who have not yet been able to see it, and its presentation during the present season by a greatly strengthened company and in a realistic style will be one of the leading features of the theatrical world.

The letter alluded to is as follows:

Manager of "100 Wives" Combination:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
WASHINGTON, March 23, 1882.

SIR: I take great pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of your favor of a few days since, and beg leave to state that I enjoyed your play greatly, and can commend it most sincerely as moral in tone, and yet vividly portraying many features of the loathsome evil at which it is aimed.

Very respectfully,
D. C. HASKELL.

I concur in all Mr. Haskell has said.
WARREN KEIFER.

—In a little over seventeen years it will be A. D. 1900. Isn't it time to begin to think of doing something in honor of the birth of the new century? Seventeen years is none too much time for doing some things. It is over thirteen years already since the Brooklyn bridge was commenced, and that is not finished yet. Some of us who do not mix our whiskey with other liquors, and are prudent in other things, will be alive in 1900. Something should be done to give the new century a good "send off." Let some patriotic Centre county citizen suggest what sort of a celebration it will be advisable to have. In the meanwhile, without waiting for a suggestion on the subject, we advise our hungry citizens to step into Sechler's grocery store and secure enough to satisfy their hunger and to last them many a long day from his superior stock of groceries. It would be just like Sechler to purchase a large supply of fresh groceries, confectionery, &c., appropriate to the holiday trade, and this is the most favorable season in the year to patronize his establishment.

—Mr. John Myers, (colored), who is over 82 years of age, was married a few days ago to Mrs. Mary L. Harris, (also colored), who is only 28, the wedding occurring in Philadelphia. The groom was the body servant of Stephen Girard up to the time of his death in 1831. He is a handsome darkey and very jolly even at his advanced age. The wedding was attended by the cream of Philadelphia colored society.

—Ladies' furs and fur trimmings, all grades and styles, at the Bee Hive.

A STRANGE INSCRIPTION.

In a certain cemetery is a tomb with this inscription:

"This stone was raised by Sarah's lord,
Not Sarah's virtues to record—
For they're well known to all the town—
But it was raised to keep Sarah down."

We don't know what ailed Sarah, but we venture to say that if Sarah had had Hunt's Remedy, her "lord" would not have had the satisfaction of raising a monument to her. Diseases of the kidneys, liver, and urinary organs keep people down even more effectually than monuments, but Hunt's Remedy is the great healer that overcomes these diseases, and lifts men up to health and vigor. Many a man who is in a fair way to have a monument in some cemetery within a year, would have, like Hezekiah of old, a new lease of life by taking Hunt's Remedy.

—The County Commissioners give notice that no orders will be issued after December 18th until the close of the year.

—A good investment: Purchasing groceries at Sechler's store.

—Have you seen it? If not, go and take a look at it at your earliest opportunity, even if obliged to go out of your way, as it will repay you. We refer to the artistic display of dolls in one of the show windows at Bunnell & Aikens' music store, corner of Bishop and Allegheny streets. Such a bouquet of wax beauties have never before been seen in Bellefonte. They are very stylish-looking little misses—blue-eyed, black-eyed and gray-eyed, with soft, wavy tresses in auburn and brown, and all rigged out in silks and satins. They are very pretty, and just the sort of a Christmas present to make the hearts of the little girls leap for joy. After feasting your eyes upon the window scene step inside and inspect the large and varied assortment of holiday goods. Bunnell & Aikens is headquarters for Christmas toys, and this year's stock is unusually complete—embracing about everything ever invented in this line. Parents in search of presents for Christmas and New Year's should bear this in mind.

Thomas Logan, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "My wife has used Brown's Iron Bitters as a tonic and recommends it highly."

—The following tracts of land have been disposed of by the Sheriff during the present term of court:

No. 1, a lot of ground located in Eagleville, sold as the property of James I. DeLong, to Christ Holter and John Lingle, of Liberty township for $

No. 2, two dwelling houses and a tract of land located in Benner township, sold as property of Andrew Brockerhoff, administrator of Felix Mullen, deceased, to J. W. Gephart, Esq., for $7,200.

No. 3, a lot of ground located on Howard street, 50ft. x 200ft., for $1100.

No. 4, about ten acres of ground located in Benner township, sold as property of Barbara and John Halderman, to J. Y. Dale, for $25.

—We regret that the G. A. R. failed to realize a handsome sum by their entertainments last week. We are informed that if the receipts are sufficient to defray all expenses they will be satisfied. Their expenses in paying Mr. Saphar and the ladies from Lock Haven, together with printing bills and hall rent, were quite heavy and will probably consume all the proceeds.

—Money can be saved by buying groceries of Sechler in the Bush House row.

—Gregg Post, G. A. R., did not hold an election of officers on Saturday night as a quorum could not be got together. That business will consequently come up at the next regular meeting, two weeks hence.

Unless it had great merit Parker's Ginger Tonic could not be so popular. Its sale has rapidly spread all over the country, because invalids find it gives them new life and vigor when other medicines fail.—Ohio Farmer.

Erie's Experience.

ANOTHER CURE UTTERLY WITHOUT A PRECEDENT.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 10, 1881.

DR. HARTMAN: I cannot but express my thanks to you for the great benefit I received from the use of Peruna and Manalin. One bottle of each placed me squarely on my feet, after a long sickness, which had laid me in bed and then left me lame and crippled. Three days' use of these remedies dispensed with the cane, and in a week I was perfectly well.

N. J. WRIGHT,
Business Agent Erie Evening Herald.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

The North American Review for December commands attention no less by the eminence of its contributors than by the value and timeliness of its table of contents. First, there is a symposium on "The Health of American Women," regarded from three distinct points of view: Dr. Dio Lewis considers the question as it is effected by the prevailing style of feminine attire, especially by the practice of tight lacing; Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton points out the many injurious influences of social environment; and Dr. James Read Chadwick sets forth the effects of education, climate and food, and finally discusses the question whether the mondification produced in the European human type by transfer to American lessens the fertility of women. Governor Buren R. Sherman, of Iowa, writes of the "Constitutional Prohibition" of the liquor traffic in that State, and maintains that the measure is in entire accord with the traditions of the original settlers, and approved by men of all political parties and nationalities. General Grant, in an article entitled "An Underserved Stigma," states the facts of Gen. Fitz John Porter's case, and argues that the sentence of court martial that cashiered him was based on a misconception of the essential circumstances. Richard A. Proctor writes of "The Influence of Food on Civilization," discussing with much learning and force some of the most interesting sociological problems of the present day and of the near future. Prof. Fisher, of Yale College, in defining the causes of "The Decline of Clerical Authority," holds that this decline, which affects the status of church and minister only as a part or function of the secular State, is by no means to be regretted, and that the spiritual influence of the church and its ministry is to-day greater than of old. Finally, there is a symposium upon the conditions of "Success on the Stage," the contributors being six of our most prominent actors—John McCullough, Joseph Jefferson, Madame Mojeska, Lawrence Barrett, Maggie Mitchell, and William Warren.

Thanksgiving at the Brockerhoff.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. McMillen, of the Brockerhoff House, invited their friends to dine with them on Thanksgiving day, extending the hospitality of the spacious apartments and elegant cuisine of that hotel in the most elaborate manner known to the entertainer's art. The neat cards of invitation were couched in the following words:

1882.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. McMillen would be pleased to receive you at their annual Thanksgiving dinner at 1 o'clock p. m.

There are very few families in town who did not participate in some sort of a celebration of the day either at home or with relatives, and consequently many were prevented accepting the kind invitation, but, nevertheless, a large number took advantage of it and sat down to the costly and bounteous collation at about 1:30 o'clock. The bill-of-fare, which was printed on a beautifully embellished card, included all the delicacies of the season. The tempting dishes displayed the art of cookery brought to the highest perfection. Following is a reprint of the delectable menu:

—A social club has been organized by a few of the convivial young gentlemen of this place. Its weekly meetings are held in a room in Humes' bank-building. Much benefit is derived from the pleasant and harmless association for purely enjoyable purposes.

—When a gentleman enters the post office at Altoona they put him through the mails, and if he don't have three cents about him they hold him for postage. The last victim, according to the Tribune, was Thomas Tierney, Ionia, Michigan.

—Guggenheimer is paying the highest price in cash for hides and skins of all kinds.

—Oh, say! Have you seen the immense variety of useful holiday gifts at the Bee Hive?

—Call to see the novelties in gent's furnishing goods at the Bee Hive.

—Buffalo Bill will soon visit Altoona.

Baby Elephant.

Barnum is enjoyed with his acquisition—the baby elephant—and declares $300,000 could not buy it. He offers $52,000 for an insurance of the life of the infant for 52 weeks. Surely, if he knew the full value of Peruna and Manalin, he would do no such foolish thing, as they are the most successful protective medicines that have ever been introduced to the human family. No one can take any disease while taking Peruna before each meal, and keeping the bowels regular with Manalin. Ask your druggist for the book on the "Ills of Life."

—The rapid increase in the trade of Harry Teats & Co. is not surprising to those who have tested the quality of the groceries.

Take Notice!

It is very important to be prepared for cold weather, to have your winter clothing at hand, your overcoat ready to put on at a moment's warning, your house full of coal, and your furnace ready to light. In this matter, to be forewarned is to be forearmed. What does every event of life teach, but to be always ready for cold weather? What a calamity to be frozen to death! Who was ever frozen and then thawed out that survived the process? Cold is dangerous even in moderately cold weather. People have been frost bitten, or "caught cold" and had a fearful disturbance with their circulatory functions. Be warned in time! Make haste! Stand not upon the order of your going, but go at once to the Boston Clothing House, just opened, in Reynolds' Block, opposite Brockerhoff House, Bellefonte, Pa., and get supplied with warm winter clothing, boots, shoes, hats and caps.

PE-RU-NA

Is Nature's greatest remedy, and is the principal ingredient of almost every prescription Dr. Hartman gives to his private patients.

PERUNA pleasantly agrees with every one—the young, the old, the middle-aged, the babe and the mother.

PERUNA cleanses the system of all its impurities; tones the stomach, regulates the heart, unlocks the secretions of the liver, strengthens the nerves and invigorates the brain.

PERUNA is the greatest appetizer, makes blood, and to the weary and tired from the toils and cares of the day it gives sweet and refreshing sleep.

PERUNA is composed wholly of vegetable ingredients, each one a great remedy in itself.

PERUNA is pleasant in taste and will help the stomach to digest any article of food.

In Liver and Kidney diseases, and in Chronic Catarrh, it has positively no equal. It never fails.

Almost as Bad.

What the Perplexed Physicians do in Cases of Emergency.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease bothers the medical men almost as badly as does cancer. Having passed a certain stage, both point straight to eternity. It may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any kidney trouble acting like it I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster? If so, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest awards. 14-48-4t

THE LATEST NEWS.

Gossip from Washington.

WASHINGTON, November 27.—Gov. Wells said to-day that he had not yet been able to get his witnesses together and therefore would not be ready to go on with the preliminary examination in the Dickson case to-morrow.

The public printer has appointed Aven Pearson, of Chicago, superintendent of the Congressional Record, to succeed M. D. Helm, dismissed.

The president to-day appointed Colgate Hoyt a director of the Union Pacific railroad, in the place of George E. Spencer, dismissed. Hoyt is well known as a member of the firm of James B. Colgate & Co., bankers, of New York city.

Marshal Henry was interviewed here to-day relative to his removal by the president on Saturday last. He expressed the same sentiment as he did in the interview telegraphed from Cleveland, and in answer to the question "What are you going to do?" the marshal replied, "I am going to fight"

Secretary Folger denies himself to visitors this morning, being engaged on the preparation of his annual report. His private secretary announces the story that he has tendered his resignation as entirely unfounded. The lease of Folger's residence in Washington expires on December 15th. The friends of the Secretary attribute the report of his resignation to this fact. Folger, however, has renewed the lease for one year.

Two Men and a Boy Killed.

UNIONTOWN, November 26.—William Fields, his little son James and Isaac Dean were in a wagon yesterday laden with flour near Frost's station, on the Southwest Pennsylvania railroad. When they attempted to cross the track the mules balked and refused to go further. At the same moment a south-bound passenger train came along at the rate of tewenty-five miles an hour and dashed into the wagon. There was a white cloud of flour, the wagon was broken into splinters, the two Fields were hurled high in the air and fell by the roadside and Dean was thrown in front of the engine. The locomotive ran two hundred yards, when the engineer discovered a man hanging by the jaw to a bolt in front of his locomotive. It was Dean. An iron hook on the bolt had entered his flesh under the jaw, had pierced the tongue, and, suspended in this way, he hung helpless till released by the trainmen. The persons who were in the wagon, one of whom was an 8 year-old boy, are all dead.

Clerks Fight a Duel.

CHARLOTTSVILLE, N. C., Nov. 27.—Two youths, Peter Dick and Robert Roan, clerks in a mercantile house here, fought an impromptu duel on Saturday in the house in which Dick is employed. The young men, with several others, were engaged in playing tricks on one another during the evening. Roan threw red pepper at Dick, some of which got in his eyes. This so enraged the youth that he demanded instant reparation. The offender agreed to give him satisfaction. As pistols could not be obtained, butcher knives were selected from the hardware stock instead and time was called. The hot-headed practical jokers took their places in the counting room and began to hack at one another with their weapons. Lunge after lunge was made between the duelists until Roan finally struck his antagonist in the stomach near the naval, slashing the flesh open diagonally from that point up across the left breast. The wounded man was at once placed under proper treatment.

Wont Agree.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 27.—At the Omaha company's headquarters late to-night the opinion was freely expressed that President Parker will not agree to the proposition for the restoration of rates and a conference looking to arbitration, but will require that certain preliminary agreements as to the division shall be made before a truce is declared. The opinion was also expressed that unless the truce was agreed to to-morrow the west bound passenger rate would be cut at Chicago on Wednesday probably to one dollar. No change in rates was announced by any of the roads to-day.

Freight Wreck.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., November 27.—At an early hour this morning a destructive freight wreck occurred on the Northern Central railroad a short distance outside of the borough limits. Two freight trains moving in opposite directions crushed into each other, piling up the cars in a confused mass and tearing up the track. The fireman of one of the trains was badly though not fatally hurt. No one else was injured. The passenger trains are transferring passengers around the wreck It will probably take all day to clear away the debris and repair the track.

Fourteen Persons Killed.

LONDON, November 27.—A train on the North Scotland railway which left McDuff at 4 o'clock this afternoon fell through the bridge at Fyoie, Aberdeenshire. Fourteen persons were killed and many injured. The engine had passed in safety, but all the carriages were wrecked.

Crime in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., November 30.—A case of attmepted forcible abduction took place here to-day, which it is believed by the police, may afford something like a possible explanation of the methods adopted in the cases of Mrs. Nelson and little Maggie Hennecke. Though every means has been tried to find these two missing persons, all efforts have been in vain, and the weeks roll away without any satisfactory explanation of their disappearance. Failing in all other clews, the case reported may furnish some idea of the means adopted in the cases mentioned if the theory of abduction be accepted in these cases. Yesterday a young girl, said to be prepossessing in appearance, living in the family of Emil Schneider, while out for an errand, became confused in regard to localities and lost her way. As she stood looking up and down the street a man in a buggy drove up to the sidewalk and spoke to her. She asked the way and he told her to jump in and he would "carry her right along," as he was "going that way." Without any suspicion she accepted. She soon began to think she was on the wrong road and asked to let out. The man refused and whipped up his horse. She began to scream and he put one hand over her mouth and pushed her into the back part of the buggy. She began to struggle which ended in her falling from the vehicle, spraining her ankle and suffering other injuries. He drove on, leaving her lying in the snow. A full description of the team and the driver has been furnished to the detectives, and the arrest of the fellow is hourly expected.

A Horrible Murder and Suicide.

PITTSBURGH, November 28.—This evening John Muller, a well-to-do saloon keeper, while shaving himself, sent his little girl out on a trivial errand. When she returned, fifteen minutes after, she saw her father and mother lying on the floor in great pools of blood, their throats cut from ear to ear. She ran out on the street and her screams summoned the police to the scene. They found on the piano the razor with which Muller had killed his wife and himself. It was covered with blood and had been partly replaced in its case. There had been no witnesses to the tragedy, but it is supposed that after the child had gone out Muller, seized with sudden impulse, had crossed the room to where his wife was sitting and before she had time to give an alarm, cut her throat with the razor with which he had been shaving and immediately afterwards had drawn it across his own throat. Muller's motive is unknown, but it is supposed that he was maddened by jealousy.

Daren't be Out at Night.

DUBLIN, November 28.—The meeting of the privy council to-day was the best protected one ever held by that body since the Fenian scare in 1867. Earl Spencer, lord lieutenant, presided in person. It was resolved to proclaim the city under the operation of the curfew section of the repression act, which authorizes the police to arrest all suspicious persons found on the streets between an hour after sunset and an hour before sunrise. A proclamation was also agreed to offering a reward of £5,000 for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of Field's assailants with the usual provisions of pardon and protection to the informers.

Had Their Minds Relieved.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Postal employes are in a state of anxious suspense over the rumor that official decapitations are to be made in that department for connection with star route matters. The feeling was somewhat relieved when it was known that the subject did not come up at to-day's cabinet meeting. The postmaster general says he is not aware that any removals are contemplated and that the gentlemen in his department who have became the subject of public mention as likely to be removed have not to his knowledge been officially impugned.

A Murder and Suicide.

NORWICH, Conn., November 27.—This morning William Abner, a mulatto living on Lake street, quarreled with his wife. He was jealous and blamed her for being out nights. They came to blows and Abner cut her fearfully with a razor and then shot her. She had a 9-months-old babe in her arms when he attacked her, but the child escaped unhurt. After shooting his wife Abner shot himself. Surgeons say that neither can recover. They were a young couple, each being about 25 years old.

A Brace of Railroad Casualties.

LANCASTER, Pa., November 27.—Percy Keefer, a brakeman on an east-bound freight train on the Pennsylvania railroad, fell from his train near Rohrestown yesterday morning and was run over and killed. Torence McGurth, a puddler at the Safe Harbor iron works, while intoxicated last Saturday night, laid down on the track of the Columbus and Port Deposit railroad to sleep and was run over and killed.

Fatal Accident.

LEWISTOWN, November 27.—C. A. Redline, outside boss at the Logan steel works, while doing some repairing in the hammer shops this afternoon, fell from the top of the rigging to the ground, a distance of about forty five feet, and striking his head upon an anvil, was killed instantly. He was aged about forty-five years and was a prominent Mason. He leaves a wife and several small children.

A Steamship Sunk.

HALIFAX, Nov. 30.—The steamship Cedar Grove struck the ledge off Whitehead, Guysboro, last night, and sank. One boat, with the chief officer, engineer, and twenty-two men arrived safe at Canso. Another boat, with Captain Fritz, his wife, a lady passenger, and the remainder of the crew is missing.

The missing passenger is Mrs. Fairall. Another passenger, Stephen McAvilty, is among the saved. He makes the following statement: "I was below when the vessel struck. The chief officer requested me to look out for the boats, provisions, water, etc. After providing for these, I went below again at the chief officer's request, as several firemen had refused to work. After an hour and a-half work, the chief engineer ordered all on deck. When I reached the deck I discovered the vessel sinking rapidly and everyone had abandoned her but myself, the second and third engineers and one fireman. We leaped into the water together. The fireman and I were picked up by the chief engineer's boat. I saw or heard nothing of Captain Fritz or the others who left the sinking ship with him. I last saw Miss Fairall at the cabin door. We had hard work to keep the boat afloat, having to bail constantly, but reached land at nine o'clock in the morning."

Myers and George.

NEW YORK, November 30.—About 3,000 persons were at the Polo grounds to-day to witness the match between Myers and George. The track, everything considered, was in first class condition. The betting was in favor of George $30 to $20, but comparatively little changed hands. The distance was three-quarters of a mile. George's time for this distance, in England, is three minutes and eight seconds. Shortly after noon the contestants appeared on the field and were greeted with round after round of applause. The line was told and signals given, the English champion taking the lead and keeping it to the end of the race, the time being three minutes three and one-half seconds. Myers followed six yards behind. His time was three minutes thirteen seconds.

Funeral of a Dwarf.

READING, Nov. 30.—A very large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral of Annie M. Sherer, the Stonersville dwarf, which took place to-day from the residence of the parents, near Stonersville. The remains were dressed in a white shroud and lay in a small coffin only twenty-eight inches long by eight inches wide. Four little girls acted as pall-bearers. Rev. B. D. Zweizig delivered an eloquent discourse at the house and Rev. A. S. Leinbach preached at the Schwartzwald church, taking the text Luke 8:52: "Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth." The interment was made at the cemetery adjoining the church. The deceased, aged ten years, when alive weighed ten pounds, and only six pounds after death. The dwarf that is still living never weighed more than eleven pounds.

Frayne's Fatal Shot.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 30.—This afternoon at the Coliseum theatre, in the fourth act of the play 'Si Slocum,' Frank Frayne in shooting the apple off the head of 'Lucy Slocum,' personated by Miss Annie Von Behren, missed the apple and shot Miss Von Behren in the head. She died in fifteen minutes. Frayne was immediately arrested. The curtain fell and the play was stopped. The audience supposed the victim was only slightly hurt. Frayne used a Stevens rifle, No. 22 calibre, and was executing his backward shot. The catch snap of the rifle was imperfect and slipped just as the hammer fell, blowing the cartridge shell out backwards.

Virginia Politics.

RICHMOND, Va., November 28.—The board of canvassers have finally decided to throw out the vote of Gloucester county and have awarded a certificate to Mayo. The board then adjourned until to-morrow, when the case of the congressman-at-large will be taken up. If, as there is no doubt, a certificate is given to John S. Wise, Virginia's delegation in the Forty-eighth congress will stand, coalitionists 6, democrats 4. Several of the seats will be contested by democrats when congress meets.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, whilst sulphur, sugar of lead, and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggists for it. Each bottle is warranted. Smith, Kline & Co., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York. 14 24 1y

—We learn from the columns of the Democrat that Mr. Howard Spangler has taken unto himself a life companion in the person of Miss Ella Bayard, "One of Bellefonte's prettiest fair ones." May their married life be long and pleasant is the wish of the NEWS.

—Mr. H. M. Wolf, Jr., manager of the Williamsport Sun and Banner, wants to be postmaster of the new House of Representatives. Well, as it is quite evident that the Democrats will convert the House into a circus we see no objection to a menagerie in connection with it with a Wolf as the chief attraction.

—David Tyler, Esq., died at his residence in Tyler, Clearfield county, on Thursday, November 23, in the 74th year of his age. He has resided at Tyler since 1849, Clearfield county being then an almost unbroken wilderness. At that time it required three days to make the journey in a wagon from Milesburg, this county, to Tyler.

—Mrs. Wilhelmina Girod and Miss Carrie Wehn carry on quite an extensive grocery business at Milesburg, which is rapidly attracting the patronage of the people of that section. They have recently commenced to retail oysters. We hope the last venture will prove a success as it is great convenience to those who are fond of the delicious bivalves.

—The transit of Venus is not an interesting spectacle and its importance is chiefly due to the fact that it affords an opportunity of calculating the distance between the sun and the earth, which in 1874 was reckoned at from 92,000,000 to 93,500,000 miles. It is hoped that the calculation to be made to-day (Wednesday) will still further reduce this margin.

—Williamsport is having its full share of sensations. Murders and suicides are weekly occurrences. The favorite method of sliding off this mortal sphere, however, is by inhaling the ordinary illuminating gas. When people who stop at the hotels in that city go to bed they blow out the gas, retire to troubled slumbers and perhaps never wake again this side of Jordan.

—A very enjoyable surprise party was given on Tuesday evening of last week at the residence of Postmaster John Johnston on Linn street. It was for the benefit of Mr. Harry Johnston, a son of the aforesaid gentleman. About 35 persons were present and the event will long be remembered with pleasure by all who were so fortunate as to participate in it.

Death of Henry Woodring.

The Altoona Tribune, of November 29, refers to the death of Henry Woodring, the unfortunate brakeman whose arm was crushed while coupling cars a few days ago, as follows:

His sufferings during the six days intervening the accident and dissolution were intense. Deceased was aged 36 years and 10 months and leaves a wife and six children—the oldest 12 years and the youngest 2 years and 6 months, besides a father, mother, four brothers and three sisters to mourn his sad death.

Henry Woodring was a son of Mr. John Woodring, of Port Matilda, and brother of Conductor John Woodring on valley wreck train, Engineer Samuel Woodring on Clearfield branch, Mrs. William Huston, of Tyrone, Mrs. Jere Weston, of Altoona, and two single brothers. Mr. Woodring was conductor on one of the branch roads for a number of years till by one of those often unexplained occurrences he was reduced to the position of brakeman, which position he was nobly filling at the time of the accident which resulted in his death. He was exceedingly popular among his railroad friends and beloved by all who knew him.

—Mr. Al. Haupt tumbled beautifully on High street on Wednesday morning of last week. His feet flew in the air and the force was so great as to cause one of his overshoes to fly from his foot and go on about two rods in advance of him.

—Mr. Adam Rankin, of Shamokin, died on Tuesday, the 26th, after quite a long illness. He was a brother of Mr. Joseph Alexander Rankin, of this place. The funeral services occur on Friday.

A Church Gathering.

The Northern Conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Central Pennsylvania convened in the Lutheran church at Salona, Clinton county, Tuesday evening, November 21. The opening sermon, based on Phil. 2: 1, first part, was delivered by Rev. J. A. Koser, of Pine Grove Mills. The officers chosen for the ensuing year are: President, Rev. Samuel E. Furst, of Bellefonte; Secretary, Rev. George S. Diven, of Bealsburg; Treasurer, Rev. John Tomlinson, of Aaronsburg. The usual routine business was properly disposed of.

But one judgment was expressed as to the interesting character of the proceedings in general, the topics discussed being embraced in the following: 1st, the third article of the Augsburg Confession, viz: "of the Son of God and his mediatorial work," opened with a paper by Rev. William. E. Fischer, of Centre Hall; 2d, "Pastoral Visitation," opened by Rev. J. Keller Miller, of Centre Hall; 3d, "Reciprocal Duty of Pastor and People." This question, being so closely allied to the 2d, was discussed under the same head.

Wednesday evening was devoted to missions, Revs. S. E. Furst and J. Tomlinson addressing the meeting.

On Thursday afternoon a children's meeting was held in the church which was addressed by Revs. Greenoe, Zimmerman and Geo. S. Diven. The closing sermon was preached by Rev. C. W. Sechrist, of Zion, on Thursday evening.

The next meeting of Conference will be held in Zion, April 17, 18 and 19, 1883. Rev. J. Keller Miller was appointed to prepare a paper for the next meeting on the 4th article of the Augsburg Confession, viz: "The Doctrine of Justification."

It was resolved that the series of papers prepared and in course of preparation by members of Conference, on the several articles of the Augsburg Confession, shall become the property of Conference, and when completed shall be published in regular order in book form.

An Early Morning Fire.

There are many people in Bellefonte who do not know that what might have been a disastrous fire occurred about 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning of last week at the Butts House, on the corner of Allegheny and Bishop streets, kept by our pleasant friend, Mr. Frank X. Lehman. At the hour above mentioned four men who slept in a room just over the wash house were awakened by dense clouds of smoke which almost filled the apartment. They hastily arose and gave the alarm. The house was filled with guests, who were indulging in those pleasant dreams which accompany the soundest and most refreshing slumber. Imagine their feelings on being awakened and told that the house was on fire. The proprietor and his wife were among the last that were aroused as they occupied an apartment in a part of the building furthest removed from the flames. We understand that both hose companies were on hand and accomplished valuable work in completely extinguishing the flames before they had damaged the building to any serious extent, although we sincerely regret the loss and inconvenience which the fire occasioned Mr. Lehman. The house is still as pleasant and comfortable as ever and the gentlemanly proprietor is genial as of yore in welcoming his guests.

Mr. Lehman did not retire until 1 o'clock that morning and is certain that the fire was not burning at that time. He thinks that sparks were smouldering in the rubbish in the wash house ever since the washing operations of Monday were completed. Everything in the room was damp at the time and he infers that as soon as it was sufficiently dry the sparks developed into a flame.

The Planets in December.

Venus leads off with a grand transit and inferior conjunction. Jupiter comes next in reaching on the 18th the most important epoch of his course, opposition with the sun, when the eastern sky seems to glow as he comes above the horizon. Saturn pursues the even tenor of his way high up among the stars. Mars shows a throb of life as he arrives in conjunction with the sun, and gives promise of some time reaching opposition, when his tiny moon will come into view. Mercury is busy enough to deserve the title of messenger of the gods. The conjunction of Venus, Mercury and Mars with the sun and with each other show how near they are to the great luminary and how nearly their tracks touch upon each other.

—Henry Woodring, of Tyrone, whose death was recorded in a former issue, was a relative of ex-Sheriff Woodring of this place.

—The Lock Haven Journal alludes to the difficulty which took place between the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pennsylvania and Western as follows: The legal action taken by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company was precipitated by Mr. Collins and thirty-five of his men, who commenced cutting on the line of the Snow Shoe branch of the Bald Eagle Valley railroad. Word was immediately sent to Superintendent Blair, of Tyrone, who, accompanied by seventy-five men, the Sheriff of Centre county and sufficient iron to lay an additional track on the right of way proceeded to Hurxthal Summit, beyond Snow Shoe. Unless operations on the part of Mr. Collins had ceased, there would have been a collision, but the latter cheerfully consented to suspend work until the Pennsylvania company could issue an injunction. The Pennsylvania company cannot prevent its competitor from passing under or over its rails, but they have a right to demand certain rights and guarantees, as to bridges, etc.

—On Wednesday, the 22d of November, we recorded an accident which occurred to Mr. Henry Woodring on the day previous. He was a railroad brakeman and while making a coupling at Miller's station near Sandy Ridge, on the Tyrone and Clearfield railroad, he slipped, his right arm being caught between the bumpers. We regret to record that he never recovered from the shock which the sad accident occasioned. He lingered until Monday night, the 27th of November, at eight o'clock when he expired. His home was in East Tyrone, where his death occurred. He is a brother of Conductor Woodring of the working train, at this place.

—The Supreme Court has just rendered a decision that taxes paid under a mistake of law cannot be recovered by the taxpayer.

THE SUN.—NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read The Sun during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like The Sun for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs The Sun makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. The Sun has absolutely no purpose to serve, save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that The Sun is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonianism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, The Sun stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interest of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that The Sun is the best religious paper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of The Sun discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to this individual liking.

If you already know The Sun, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know The Sun you will find it to be the mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, a sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

—T. C. Hipple, Esq., of Lock Haven, presented each member of the police force of that city with a fine turkey on Thanksgiving day.

—The sermons of Rev. T. L. Flood, D. D., in the M. E. church, on Sunday were listened to with much interest by large congregations.

—The "home talent" who took part in the "German Volunteer" express themselves as being enthusiastic devotees of the dramatic art.

—The regular monthly sociable of the Lutheran congregation will be held in the lecture room of the church of that denomination this (Wednesday evening.

—A medical journal has discovered that there are from 100,000 to 200,000 hairs on a woman's head. The number of hairs on a man's head depends considerably on the time that has elapsed since his marriage.

—A date has at length been fixed for the long expected lecture to be delivered by Prof. W. H. Jordan, of the State College, in the Court House at Lock Haven. Monday evening, December 11, is the time.

—Will D. Saphar, of "German Volunteer" fame, approached too near the powder Friday night and felt its effect almost as sensibly as at any time while trying to put down the rebellion. He should take care while performing with Bellefonte parties, as they Dare do anything.

—A letter is held in the Bellefonte post-office addressed "Secretary of the Nittaning Mining Company, Centre county, Pa.," and also another addressed "Secretary of the Midland Mining Company, Centre county, Pa." They both bear the postmark Dayton, Ohio. Where are the secretaries?

—Mr. E. T. Livingstone, driver of the State College stage, missed his wolf skin robe on Friday from his seat. It was either lost or stolen, he is not sure which, but is inclined to think that a certain gentleman of this place who has a mania for robes, could tell something about it. A detective will be set on his track.

Fight with a Bear.

Captain John M. Bowman and Dr. B. L. Langdon, two well-known sportsmen of Muncy, just returned from a week's hunting in the wilds of Sullivan county. On the second day of their hunt they discovered fresh bear tracks leading in the direction of the nearest settlements, and resolved on capturing bruin.

They did not discover the bear that day, but on the following day Doctor Langdon became separated from his companion, and while he was in the act of clambering over the trunk of a fallen hemlock in a laurel thicket he was startled by a fierce growl and on pausing to reconnoitre he discovered the bear sitting on its haunches in the bushes watching him. He acknowledges that he was startled by the monster, which was of enormous size and evidently not disposed to retreat.

What to do he did not know. He dared not use his shotgun on the beast and the captain was not in hailing distance with his rifle. As he stood deliberating the bear made a movement toward him, evidently bent on mischief. Its eyes were fiery and it displayed a double row of savage-looking teeth. He instinctively raised his gun and let drive with one barrel, the contents of which went crashing into the bear's ears. This enraged the brute and, rising on its hind legs, it rushed upon the doctor, who emptied the contents of the other barrel. In a moment the savage beast, smarting with pain, was close upon him and he could feel its hot breath on his face as it grappled him. He clubbed it with his shotgun, but as the weapon descended the bear warded off the blow with its right paw and sent the gun spinning through the air.

Matters now became desperate. The doctor found himself in the grasp of the beast, but he retained sufficient self-posession of mind to resolve to sell his life dearly. Grasping his hatchet, which was heavy and sharp, he rained blows on the head of the monster. Every cut went to the skull of the animal, and as it reached with its powerful arms to embrace him he sunk the weapon in its flesh to the hilt. This seemed to disconcert the beast for a moment, but it soon rallied and, grasping the bold hunter, prepared to give him the death-hug. Just as it was drawing him into close quarters Captain Bowman, who had heard the shots, appeared on the scene, and, taking in the situation at a glance, sent a bullet through the head of the bear and his comrade was saved.

On releasing himself from the arms of the animal the doctor found that he had sustained but trifling damage, but he regarded his escape from a horrible death as remarkable.

Coming Amusements.

The amusement season in Bellefonte this season promises to be lively and the entertainments of a character to please all and disappoint none. Manager Sourbeck has closed engagements with a number of first-class companies of the minstrel and dramatic order, and will open correspondence with other star managers in a few days. The first troupe to visit us will be M. B. Levitt's Gigantean Minstrels, which will occupy the boards at the Opera House on the evening of December 13th, to be followed, on the 19th, by I. W. Baird's great combination of forty people. McKee Rankin's company in "The Danites," one of the greatest of American plays, is booked for December 29, and "Esmeralda," by a Madison Square company, on February 2d. The same company will appear here again February 10th, in the "Professor" a very popular drama, which has met with great success in the large cities. Collender's Minstrels, the original colored troupe, has also been secured for a night, and will make their bow, the first, we believe, to a Bellefonte audience, on the evening of February 5th. The above are all No. 1 troupes, and Mr. Sourbeck promises to follow them up with others of equally good standing. He is determined to book no troupes that are not deserving of public patronage, a stand which the theatre-going people of Bellefonte will heartily commend. Good shows will always be liberally patronized, but "scrub" troupes and can-can organizations must steer clear of Bellefonte hereafter.

—We have heretofore referred to the fact that the board of commissioners were about to pay $10,000 of the bonded indebtedness of the county, and are happy to state that on Tuesday, the 28th of November, that was accomplished. This makes a grand total of $22,000 paid during the year. A large part of the amount was paid from the proceeds of the collection of outstanding taxes, which it was the duty of former boards to collect. We congratulate the Commissioners on the result.

H. K. Miller's Horse.

The circumstances surrounding the arrest and escape of the thief who stole the horse of Mr. H. K. Miller, of Pleasant Gap, are creating quite a sensation in Elmira.

The thief's name is Frank Haskell. A person named Bacon, who apparently does not bear an enviable reputation, visited Haskell in jail and was employed as his counsel, and although he is not a lawyer by profession he prepared a petition for and secured a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Dexter, for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of the thief's detention. Mr. Bacon making the argument for the prisoner, and there being no evidence in the possession of the law officers that could convict the prisoner, he was discharged. Then the wily Bacon purchased the horse from his client thief for $20 in addition to his services, although the animal was easily worth $200. The thief hastily left the city and has not since been seen.

Chief of Police Knapp went to Cross' livery, where the animal was secured, and locked it up in Sol. Bunnell's stable. Then Bacon, claiming to be the owner of the horse, obtained a writ of replevin, which was placed in 'Squire Pine's hands as constable, who broke into Bunnell's stable and took the horse into his posession.

This was the state of affairs when Mr. Miller arrived in Elmira on Thursday, November 23. Mr. Bacon made up his mind that he could not insist in his claim to own the horse, so immediately, in order to make himself good for the money he had paid the thief, he planned to get a reward of $50 offered for the recovery of the horse. Police Officer Weaver also claimed the reward and notified Mr. Miller that if not paid to him he would bring suit and attach the horse. Between these two fires Mr. Miller did not know what to do, but finally hired Jacob Schwartz, Esq., to look after his interests and he at once took legal steps to recover the animal. We suppose that after some tedious and costly process of unwinding the complicated condition of affairs which the notorious Bacon has brought about the horse will once again be restored to its rightful owner. Bacon should be punished for aiding and abetting the escape of the thief, who is also wanted on a serious charge at Greensburg, Pa.

A Practical Talk on a Beautiful Science.

The audience hall of the Y. M. C. A. was well filled with an intelligent audience Friday night to hear the lecture on "Astronomy" by Prof. I. Thornton Osmond, of State College, and to witness the several diagrams of celestial objects thrown upon canvas with the aid of the oxy-calcium light. The lecture and the representations on canvas were highly successful and interesting in every particular. The complicated revolutions and courses of the heavenly bodies in the system of which the earth is a part were perspicuously displayed. The planets with their attendant satellites formed an interesting study. There were Uranus, Mars, Venus and Neptune, and above all the mighty Jupiter. The moon came in for a fair share of inspection and also the comets. The sun and the amount of heat emitted by that luminary were dwelt upon together with the theories in regard to perpetuating that heat. The audience were permitted to witness the transit of Venus before that event took place in the natural sky. They were also permitted to see a couple of noble ships sailing at least a half-dozen times around the world, totally overthrowing Rev. Jasper's theory that the earth is flat, and proving that it is not only round, but spherical. The lecturer did not introduce his hearers to any of the systems outside our own; he did not roam through space to the utter disregard of distances and capacity, but gave ascertained facts about the tides, the changes of the moon, eclipses, &c., and even that was enough to make us feel our own insignificance as an inhabitant of a globe which is by no means the most important in this planetary system. It was sufficient to make us cease to imagine that the weight of the REPUBLICAN's opinion will tip up this side of our hemisphere. After the lecture General Beaver moved a vote thanks to the lecturer and his assistant which was unanimously agreed to.

—The taxidermist of Lehigh University is at work stuffing a snowy owl or harfang, shot near Scranton recently. This species of the owl is a native of the Arctic regions, and is seldom found so far south. Its presence in this latitude is said to be a sure indication of a hard winter. The harfang is white, with very small brown spots on its back and wings, which latter measure over four feet from tip to tip.

A Case in Court.

The last will and testament seems to be an invention of human law by which a man can leave a bone of contention for his surviving kin to quarrel over. Such an instance is represented in court this week. Some time during the year 1881 Mr. John Shope, then an aged resident of Boggs township, went the way of all the earth, leaving a will that is certainly somewhat singular in its provisions, but might have been wise, nevertheless, and which six of his children are now endeavoring to set aside on the plea that their venerable father, being then well nigh 83 years old, was not in a proper condition of mind to execute such a document.

Mr. Shope, in his will, bestowed upon six of his children $1 each, leaving the residue of his earthly possessions to another daughter—Mrs. Mary Murray, who resides in that part of Milesburg known as Tangletown. The aforesaid worldly possessions amount to about $3,000. Of course, the six children are not quite satisfied with the small legacies they received and are seeking to set aside the will and have employed eminent legal counsel in the person of A. O. Furst, and John B. Linn, Esqs, for that purpose. Messrs Beaver & Gephart represent Mrs. Murray.

—It is quite evident that there are sneak thieves about and it would be well for our citizens to take extra care in securing their street doors, especially during the early evening hours. Last night two ladies who were walking down High street observed a man standing in front of one of the handsomest residences on that thoroughfare, and after they had passed he opened the door and went in. The ladies suspected something was wrong and retraced their steps past the house. When they were again near the the house the man came out and when he saw the ladies he began to stagger, affecting to be drunk. To escape him the ladies hurried across the street and although they intended to enter and warn the inhabitants of the mansion, they did not do so.

—On Monday ex-Governor Curtin left for Washington to attend to his duties in the 47th Congress in which he is a representative from this Congressional district. He will not be home again until Christmas. We dislike to lose the Governor so long a time as a citizen, but are, at the same time, rejoiced that we have in him a faithful and competent representative. If the interests of this Congressional district must be entrusted to a Democrat we know of none better fitted to attend to them than A. G. Curtin. It is the next best thing to having a genuine Republican as a representative. May his stay in Washington be pleasant, his health continue good and his work result in the prosperity of the constituents who send him thither.

Killed by a Fall of Coal.

Daniel Hayes, an employe in the mines at Snow Shoe, was killed by a fall of coal while at work on Saturday evening. He was engaged at what is known as undermining, in which men dig under a vein of coal quite a long distance, the upper surface, unless it is properly protected, being constantly in danger of falling. He and Michael Glenn, a fellow workman, had dug the required distance, when Hayes came out, and again entered the tunnel for some reason. While he was in the tunnel the coal fell, burying him beneath it. Michael Glenn, his companion, was but slightly injured. We did not learn Mr. Hayes' age, but we are informed that he was a married man and had a family dependent upon him for support.

—Mr. Hermon Miller, of Pleasant Gap, whose mare was stolen some time ago, and who afterwards went to Elmira to recover the animal, has not yet obtained possession of her. In consequence of the fact that the proper efforts were not made to keep the horse-thief in confinement, he was liberated, a man putting in appearance and offering to pay the cost. Mr. Miller has returned from Elmira, but will be required to go to that city again in the near future to submit to some legal formulæ which will be required before the mare is put in his possession.

—Hogs are sometimes compelled to crowd themselves upon the weighing scales at Brown's coal office only after the most strenuous efforts on the part of those having them in charge. John Anderson, George Gross and several other persons endeavored to perform the feat of weighing five large porkers last week and we have every reason to believe that they ingloriously failed.

—An adjourned meeting of the Huntingdon Presbytery was in session at Altoona yesterday.

—Williamsport is to have nail works.

J. G. Love, Esq., was successful in shooting a wild turkey while on a recent hunting expedition.

Miss Florence Riley and Miss Lillie Fisher, of Boalsburg, graced Bellefonte with their presence on Saturday.

Rev. William Laurie is the possessor of a type writer, which he is practicing upon and expects soon to utilize in writing his sermons.

Will D. Saphar, accompanied by his son, Reggie, of "German Volunteer" fame, favored our business office with his presence on Friday.

Will D. Saphar, and his son, Reggie, departed on Monday for Parker, where they expect to give performances of the "German Volunteer."

Misses May and Kate Best, of Lock Haven, who have been visiting the Misses Montgomery of this place, returned to their home on Monday.

Our medical friend, Dr. H. K. Hoy, has an electric battery, which Mr. Charles Glenn, the photographer, makes use of in dissipating the poignancy of neuralgic pains.

Mr. J. Witmer Wolf, who has been adding the finishing touches to his musical education by attending the Conservatory of Music in Boston, has returned to his home in Centre Hall.

Mr. Thomas W. Balling, of Bald Eagle, was in Bellefonte last Tuesday and did not neglect to pay his respects to this omice. He is a gentleman of large business experience and is more than ordinarily prosperous.

Editor VanOrmer was one of the principal figures at the banquet at the New Brockerhoff House on Thanksgiving day. He went through the entire menu with an ease and grace which proved him to be a veteran at the business.

Miss Ella McGowen, an accomplished young lady of this place, departed on Wednesday morning of last week for Kansas, where she expects to remain quite a long while. We know of at least one young gentleman who will count the hours while she is away and will await her return with extreme impatience.

Dr. L. H. Leitzell, of Connellsville, Fayette county, was in town last week, departing on the train on Wednesday. He is a dentist by profession and has a large practice in Connellsville. His boyhood home was in Rebersburg, this county, where he has many relatives and friends who will wish him success in whatever he undertakes.

Mr. E. T. Tuten, editor of the Republican, is entertaining his mother, Mrs. Nancy S. Tuten, and his sister, Miss Esther P. Tuten, of Mont Vernon, New Hampshire. The ladies arrived the 27th ult. and are expected to grace his residence with their presence during all the coming winter. We hope their visit will be very pleasant.

—On Thanksgiving day Mr. Jerry Merritt, of near Julian, stopped his two valuable horses in front of the hotel at that place and went inside. The horses started for some reason, their course leading directly across the railroad. Just as they were on the track their owner discovered their departure and, going to the door, called "Whoa!" Obedient to his command, the animals stopped. At that moment a freight train came along at a rapid rate. Mr. Merritt, observing the danger that threatened his horses, rushed forward and grasped them by the bridle, endeavoring to lead them off the track. But they were frightened and held back. The conductor did not see them in time to reverse his engine, which crushed into the noble animals whirling them lifeless from the track. We sympathize with Mr. Merritt in his unusual misfortune.

—They say the temperature is moderating and the way the beautiful snow is disappearing convinces us that the assertion is true.

—An exchange says that a gentleman whose two little daughters were dying last Thursday of diphtheria read in a newspaper of that day a communication commending the use of sulphur in cases of diphtheria. As a last resort he made a trial of it, using washed flowers of sulphur and applying it directly to the membraneous growths in the throats of the children by means of a common clay pipe. The effect was almost magical. Within two hours there was complete relief, and in two days the children, who had been given up by their physician, had completely recovered. Distilled or sublimated sulphur should be used, not the powdered, crude sulphur.

—The long standing debt on the Julian M. E. church is just on the eve of being liquidated. Rev. G. B. Ague, though in shattered health, has toiled heroically to diminish this debt.
